

DEATH COMES TO STABBER'S VICTIM

Miss Geraldine Silicani, who was stabbed seven times by an unidentified assailant as she was walking to her home in Colma from a street car on the night of August 8, passed away at South San Francisco hospital last Saturday. Everything possible was done to save the life of the victim of the brutal assailant, but all efforts were futile.

Miss Silicani was returning home about midnight after spending the evening in San Francisco with a girl friend. After alighting from the street car at Mission street, she had just passed the Colma fire house when an unidentified man, who was standing beside a parked car, asked her to go for a ride with him. Upon her refusal, he grappled with her and tried to force her into the car. Miss Silicani put up a desperate struggle, screaming for help, whereupon her assailant stabbed her seven times, the stab wounds being in her hand, side and abdomen, one of the knife wounds puncturing the liver. The injured girl was barely able to stagger into the Imperial Cafe, where she uttered a few words before she became unconscious. She was immediately taken to the South San Francisco hospital, and after first aid treatment it was hoped that she would recover.

No trace has ever been found of the brutal assailant of the unfortunate young woman, although several suspects were taken in charge, all of whom were able to prove that they were not the assailant.

At an inquest conducted by Coroner J. C. McGovern it was shown that Miss Silicani's death was caused by an ulcer brought on by the knife wounds.

Miss Silicani was the daughter of Mrs. E. Nilsen and step-daughter of Hans Nilsen, and the loving sister of Juanita Bregante, Mary, Ray and Joseph Silicani. She was a native of Colma, aged 18 years, 8 months and 7 days.

Funeral services were held last Tuesday morning from San Francisco, thence to Holy Angels' church, Colma, where a requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul. Interment was at the Italian cemetery.

CHARTER PRESENTED TO LOCAL COUNCIL

Daly City Council, K. of C., held its regular meeting last Tuesday, September 17. Many things of importance took place, chief among which was the presentation of Daly City Council's charter by District Deputy Jerome Lalor. In behalf of the local Council's appreciation of Mr. Lalor's unceasing endeavors in the formation of Daly City Council, Grand Knight R. J. Ennis presented Mr. Lalor a beautiful fourth degree K. of C. charm.

State Deputy Robert A. MacKenzie made his official visit to the Council and was more than pleased with the way in which the Council is conducting its affairs.

The Supreme Warden of the order, David Supple, told those present about the Supreme convention held at Malibu.

Seven new members were initiated into the first degree, after which refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening came to a conclusion, as all things do. W. L. M.

"APPLIED CHRISTIANITY"
PRESBYTERIAN SERMON

Following his series of definitely Christian topics, the pastor of Grace Presbyterian church will preach on the text, "By this shall all men know that you are My disciples, if you have love one to another."

The young people of the church are planning to attend the meeting of young people in support of the Loyalty Crusade which is being organized, and the delegates will be chosen on Sunday evening at the 7 o'clock meet. The church service commences at 8.

Grace church Sunday school sent a delegation to the Sunday school meeting held in West Side Christian church. Those attending were Miss Madie Irons, Miss Sybil Riddell, Mrs. Charles Roof, Mr. Howard Roof, and Rev. J. R. Stevenson.

NEW BIOLOGY NIGHT SCHOOL AT JEFFERSON HIGH SCHOOL

A new night class has been started at the high school. The work is more on the order of lectures, discussions and demonstration than regular class work. Biology is the study of life. Human hygiene and man's relation to the world about him will be especially featured. Many films from the University of California will be used. If you would care to learn something about yourself and the life about you, come out. Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7 to 9 p. m.

GEORGE E. MILLER, Instructor.

MERCHANTS WIN
ANOTHER GAME

The Daly City Merchants defeated the Ponce Athletic Club last Sunday at the Jefferson Union high school grounds by the score of 13 to 4. The Merchants got the jump on the visitors in the first inning with a run. The Daly City boys sewed the ball game up for good in the sixth inning, seven hits sending six runs over the plate.

Dick Randall, for the Merchants, pitched his usual steady game, allowing but one run up to the last two innings. The hitting of the entire team featured the game, Pat Sloan, first baseman crashing the ball to all corners of the field.

The Daly City Merchants made 20 hits, 13 runs and 2 errors. The Ponce Athletic Club made 8 hits, 4 runs and 3 errors. Batteries—Daly City, Randall and F. Strand; Ponce Athletic Club, Anderson, Guna and Duran.

This coming Sunday the Merchants expect to cross bats with the fast Darcy's Sport Shop team of San Mateo on the San Mateo city diamond. It has not yet been decided whether the game will be played in the forenoon or afternoon.

INDIANS' GRID TEAM
DEFEATED BY LICK

Unable to show dependable reserve strength, Jefferson's grid team was defeated by the Lick Tigers 14 to 0 last Friday on the Indians' football field. The score at half time was 2 to 0.

The Jefferson gridgers played a bang-up game in the first half of the contest, stopping many line plunges and allowing only two first downs to be made against them. One of these was a 29 yard pass. The safety scored in this period was the result of a bad pass from center that went over the end zone, Lick tallying two points.

Coach Ackley must have injected an overdose of fight in his charges during the rest period, as the Tigers came out and scored a touchdown from their 34 yard line on straight plays. Lick made 6 first downs in the third quarter.

The Indians showed very little fight in the fourth period as they were just about out on their feet. The opposition scored another touchdown in this quarter.

The players that starred in Jefferson's lineup were Hooten, J. Sambrailo and Kalinen. McKevitt was the outstanding player for Lick. He scored both touchdowns and gained considerable yardage on several other plays.

Jefferson gained 51 yards, lost 14, made 2 first downs and was penalized 10 yards.

Lick gained a total of 182½ yards, lost 4, made 11 first downs, and was penalized 40 yards.

JEFFERSON STARS
DISCONTINUE PLAY

The Jefferson All Stars baseball team will put away their suits until next season. The main reason for the nine breaking up is that some of the players are going to school and football practice occupies most of their time.

During the present season the All Stars won 26 out of the 31 games played. The teams that defeated them were Ocean View, Italian-American Athletic Club, Merry Bachelors, Palo Alto Greys and Darcy's Sport Shop. Every contest that they lost was played on the opponent's diamond.

Every member of the team showed a fighting spirit that is not found every place, and they deserve a lot of praise for the fine playing they exhibited, although they were not perfect by any means.

MAN USES RAZOR
TO END HIS LIFE

John Heinrichs, who had made his home in Daly City for many years, was found dead in his home, 1126 Brunswick street, last Tuesday evening, by his son Raymond.

Raymond notified Chief of Police Doyle of his gruesome find, and when an examination of the body had been made it was discovered that he had slashed his throat and wrists with a razor.

The deceased was the husband of Mrs. J. Heinrichs and the father of Gertrude, Lillian and Raymond Heinrichs.

DEATH TAKES P. T. A. MEMBER

Mrs. Florence Reeve Whitmore, of San Mateo Park, succumbed Tuesday to an illness of several weeks. Mrs. Whitmore has hundreds of friends on the peninsula and has taken prominent part in Parent-Teacher Association affairs of the two cities. She was president of the Peninsula Parent-Teacher Association last year.

Good Bye

ODDS AND ENDS
OF WEEK'S NEWS

Joe Bonzani, aged 17, of South San Francisco has begun a term of twenty-five days in the county jail in Redwood City, following sentence pronounced by Judge Lawrence H. Cook in the justice court in Menlo Park. Bonzani failed to appear in court at the appointed time in answer to charges of speeding, having no driver's license and no number plates on his motorcycle, hence the stiff sentence.

The annual membership campaign of the Burlingame chamber of commerce was launched Monday at a meeting of the membership committee. One hundred and twenty-five members are on the committee to cover the entire community on the drive for $7,750, the budget for the coming year.

In a freak motorcycle accident on the San Mateo-Hayward bridge late Sunday, Frank J. Pierce, aged 22, was killed. While eastbound on the bridge Pierce's motorcycle was crowded against the concrete railing, which tore off the handle bars and sent the rider hurtling into the air. He landed on the concrete span and was killed instantly.

Falling asleep at the wheel of his car, Harold Otis, of Palo Alto, was cut about the face early Monday when the machine crashed into a tree on El Camino Real near Peninsula avenue, Burlingame.

During the first six months of 1929, according to a report made by Frank G. Snook, Chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, San Mateo county's death toll from automobile crashes totaled twenty.

Work on filling in the land recently acquired by the Standard Oil company for a new plant on Linden avenue, South San Francisco, was commenced last Saturday preparatory to starting construction of the buildings.

A. Decenzi, of Santa Cruz, lost an arm last Monday as a result of a hunting accident. His shotgun exploded when he caught it on a barbed wire fence.

Authorities are investigating the mysterious fire which destroyed a barn where prohibition agents had raided one of the largest illicit alcohol plants ever found in the Half Moon Bay section.

Application to federal authorities in San Francisco for permission to lower the tone of a fog signal on the San Mateo-Hayward bridge will be made, following notice of complaints that the signal keeps San Mateo and Burlingame citizens awake.

Twelve women, the first all female jury in the history of San Mateo county's superior court, decided a case in 5 minutes last Friday afternoon. In the 19 years since women have been eligible as jurors, it was the first time that there has not been at least one man in the box.

Scoring San Francisco supervisors for their failure to have at least an option on Mills field before proceeding with improvements of approximately $300,000, Mayor James Rolph has offered to see Ogden L. Mills on proposed purchase of the site.

Members of the Porterville Ministerial Union are on record as being opposed to Sunday funerals. Sabbath burials "work hardships on pastors and interfere with church worship," was the reason given.

THE EAGLES NEST

At the regular meeting of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, F. O. E., held on Thursday evening of last week, there was a large attendance.

The sick committee reported all brothers on the road to recovery. We hope to see them soon at the meetings. The drum corps team sent representatives to the state meeting of Outdoor Music held at Oakland, September 14. Brothers Bolger, Collins and Heim were appointed.

The meeting of the Associated Aerics of San Mateo county will be held in South San Francisco on next Tuesday. Set that date down, for we want fifty to go. Don't leave it to the other fellow. Go yourself and make Daly City Aerie a banner one and yourself an active, interested member.

We wonder if it was the congenial Officer Schramm, playing under an assumed name, that beat Bobby Jones at Pebble Beach. Schramm was there and we know he shoots a good stick of golf.

Junior Past President Bolger was in Belmont Tuesday night.

Brother Merritt was hunting the elusive deer in Mendocino county last week. No venison means no deer sighted.

Don't forget initiation night, October 24. Five hundred by Christmas means you must bring in that friend of yours. Don't delay, for it will be a last minute rush if you do.

The Eagles congratulate El Carmelo Parlor, Native Daughters, for their victory in Santa Cruz, also convey congratulations to the Native Sons. It is keeping up the Daly City spirit of "Get what we go after." More power to all.

Brother Kennedy is on a three months visit to Roseville.

PLAN DIRIGIBLE BASE
NEAR REDWOOD CITY

Members of the San Francisco board of supervisors are on record as favoring the making of a dirigible base on property it owns in San Mateo county. The property in question is near Redwood City.

The property consists of 26 acres of land east of the Middlefield road. The land was purchased by San Francisco because the Pulgas tunnel of the Hetch Hetchy project runs under it.

The land is capable of having a 200 foot wide and 1,400 foot long hangar erected on it.

BUSINESS IS GOOD AT MILLS AIRPORT

Business was good at Mills field last week, but not as good at the preceding week, according to the regular weekly report issued Monday.

West Coast Air Transport planes carried 110 passengers during the week, in spite of the fact that forest fires prevented two through trips during the period. The run is between here and northwestern cities.

Pickwick Airways reported 48 passengers on the San Francisco-Los Angeles run. Short trip passengers numbered 912 and student flights 249.

PROVIDES FUNDS FOR JUNIPERO SERRA ROAD

An appropriation of $90,312 for San Francisco's portion of the cost of extending Junipero Serra boulevard from the San Francisco county line to School street in Colma was voted last Monday by the San Francisco board of supervisors. The extension will be 1.1 miles long and will be the first unit of the continuation of the road down the peninsula to Burlingame.

BOARD APPOINTS
STACK AS AUDITOR

Edward M. Stack of Burlingame, who has held the office of deputy county auditor for fifteen years, has been appointed as county auditor, succeeding the late County Auditor John J. Shields of Redwood City.

The appointment was made by the county board of supervisors at the regular meeting held last Monday, in Redwood City. Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey of South San Francisco made the motion that Stack be appointed. The move was seconded by Supervisor Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay.

Because of the death of Shields on Thursday of last week, it was necessary to appoint an auditor right away, as bonds and other county business must have the signature of the county auditor.

Following his appointment, Stack appointed his deputies. He appointed his sister, Mrs. Virginia M. Pohl of Burlingame, as deputy county auditor, the position he has held for so many years. Mrs. Pohl has been assistant to Shields for many years. He re-appointed Miss Anna Ryan as clerk. He is entitled to another deputy, but states that he will hold the position open for a while.

Stack was first appointed deputy county auditor by the late County Auditor W. H. Underhill on July 17, 1914. When Shields was elected the following January defeating Underhill, Stack was reappointed to serve under Shields.

Previous to his appointment in 1914, Stack was a building contractor in Burlingame and San Mateo. He has been a resident of the county since August 1, 1906.

Previous to Stack's appointment on Monday, the board directed District Attorney Franklin Swart to draw up a resolution of condolence, a copy of which will be sent to the Shields family and which will be spread upon the minutes of the board meeting.

Stack will fill the unexpired term of Shields, which ends on January 1, 1931.

MISS MARY DE LOMAS BECOMES BRIDE OF CHARLES BURDICK

Miss Mary De Lomas, daughter of Mrs. E. De Lomas, of South San Francisco, and Charles Burdick, of Parkview avenue, were married last Saturday evening at St. Maximus church, Rev. Father James Donohoe performing the ceremony, which took place at 7 o'clock.

The bride was prettily gowned in pink crepe de chine, and Mrs. Stanley Thomas, matron of honor, was also gowned in crepe de chine of the same color. Stanley Thomas acted as the groom's best man.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Thomas, on Los Banos avenue, where a wedding supper was served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. M. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Foss and Mr. and Mrs. S. Thomas.

INTERESTING P. T. A. MEETING

A very interesting meeting of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. was held last Tuesday afternoon at the Woodrow Wilson school, Mrs. C. Page, president of the association, presiding. Sixty-seven ladies were present and twenty-two new members were added to the membership list, the kindergarten class having the most mothers present. Mrs. M. B. Woodside was elected to fill the office of historian.

During the afternoon Mrs. Secor favored the ladies with several piano selections, and at the conclusion of the meeting coffee and cake were served.

The sewing circle of the association will meet at the home of Mrs. Frances Rickmann, 421 San Diego avenue, on next Tuesday afternoon.

The social whist party given by the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. on Tuesday evening of last week was a wonderful success, the ladies having seventeen tables of whist.

PENINSULA FOOTBALL

The light South San Francisco high school's football team opened their grid season by defeating Balboa's eleven 6 to 0 last Friday on the Boilermakers' field.

Numerous fumbles and offside penalties lost Alameda its chance to beat the Burlingame eleven at Burlingame, last Saturday. The final score was 0 to 0, with both teams using all of their plays in the last half in an attempt to score a touchdown.

Working the triple reverse to perfection against a team that required three quarters to start functioning, Monterey high school's eleven scored a 27 to 20 victory over San Mateo on the victor's field last Saturday.

WILL CELEBRATE
OPENING OF ROAD

Presidents of the seven chambers of commerce of San Mateo county were appointed as a "committee of seven" last Monday by the San Mateo county board of supervisors to make plans for San Mateo county's part in the celebration to mark the opening of the San Francisco unit of the Bayshore highway on October 6.

The committee is composed of Claude Sorensen, president of the San Carlos chamber of commerce; Marsden Blois, president of the San Mateo chamber of commerce; George W. Williams, president of the Burlingame chamber of commerce; Ira H. Potter, president of the South San Francisco chamber of commerce; J. P. Neifing, President of the Ravenswood chamber of commerce; Carl Wagner, president of the Redwood City chamber of commerce; and J. H. Sullivan, president of the Menlo Park chamber of commerce.

This committee will hold a meeting in the near future and will appoint sub-committee to work in conjunction with it.

"If the board of supervisors of Santa Cruz county has not adopted the necessary resolution approving or rejecting the assessments for the joint highway district No. 9, then the district has lapsed and proceedings forming the district will have to be begun all over again," District Attorney Franklin Swart told the San Mateo county board of supervisors at the meeting Monday.

Supervisor Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay, San Mateo county's director for the tri-county district, stated that he was of the opinion that Santa Cruz had not passed such a resolution and that the time limit was up some time ago.

On motion of Supervisor Francis, the board agreed to write a letter to Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher, of San Francisco, secretary of the district, to suggest that the directors hold a meeting soon to determine the present status of the district. A meeting has not been held for some time. The district was formed about a year ago to handle details of the proposed construction of a coastside scenic highway from San Francisco to Santa Cruz.

Mrs. Archibald Kincaid, of Redwood City, was appointed a member of the social service commission of San Mateo county.

An election for the purpose of forming a sanitary district at Half Moon Bay was called for October 22. Five commissioners and an assessor for the district will be elected at the same time, providing the issue carries.

The board was invited by Mayor Christensen of Palo Alto to attend a conference in that city on October 16 for the purpose of discussing steps to eliminate grade crossings on the peninsula.

A resolution of intention to bring suit in eminent domain to secure rights-of-way for a sewer at Colma was passed.

SAN MATEO COUNTY
GIVEN PUBLICITY

The September issue of the California Journal of Development devotes much of its space to the beauties and industries of San Mateo county.

Dr. C. V. Thompson, chairman of the San Mateo county board of supervisors, in an illustrated article entitled "Beauty and Business in San Mateo County" tells briefly of the history and romance of the peninsula, and the leading industries, dealing particularly with the cultivation of flowers, for which San Mateo county recently took five consecutive premiums at the California state fair.

Four full pages are devoted to views of peninsula homes and gardens and of the various industries and scenic points. Oscar Wyatt of the San Mateo county chamber of commerce supplied the interesting photographs from which the reproductions were made.

WOULD ELIMINATE
GRADE CROSSINGS

Officials of peninsula counties and cities will participate in the conference to be held in Palo Alto on October 15 for the purpose of taking steps to eliminate railroad grade crossings between San Francisco and San Jose.

The meeting has been called by Mayor C. H. Christensen of Palo Alto. Railroad executives and representatives of the state railroad and highway commissions and others interested have been invited to attend.

Senator Roy Fellon has appointed William J. Locke, city attorney of Alameda and secretary of the League of Municipalities, and C. T. Phillips of San Francisco to work with him on the sub-committee considering the project.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

San Jose residents will pay a total city, school district and county tax of $5.51 for the fiscal year 1929-1930, instead of the present rate of $5.65.

For an amount said to be approximately $3000 less than paid last year, the City Council awarded to the Vallejo Electric Light and Power Company a contract for street lighting for the next year.

Ninety cans of trout were distributed in Oroville territory by the State Fish and Game Commission, and the fry were planted in Feather river streams by thirty-five Oroville sportsmen of the Feather River Rod and Gun Club.

The San Jose Chamber of Commerce will start the biggest drive in its history in October, according to Jack Silvey, manager. "We are going to try by every means possible to demonstrate to the people of this city the service we are rendering every day in the year," declared Silvey.

In line with most counties of the state, Tulare county will keep its tax rate at the same level with last year. The new budget just approved increases valuations permitting the rate to remain at $2.85 per $100 valuation outside cities and $2.45 inside incorporated cities. The county will raise a total of $2,195,937.

The Railway Express Agency has applied to the Railroad Commission for authority to abandon its agencies at Corte Madera and Kentfield on the Northwestern Pacific Railroad.

Asserting that the Eel river is at the lowest stages in its history, farmers living along that stream have decided to form an organization to protect their land, the fish in the stream and check additional "takes" of water by power companies.

The name of Fresno is to be displayed on the stern of another steamship sailing the seven seas. The Blue Star Line has decided to change the name of its refrigeration ship, British steamer Woodard, to Fresno, in honor of the San Joaquin Valley metropolis, which ships large quantities of fruit for overseas markets.

Members of the Women's Council have asked the City Council at Sacramento to approve the recommendation of City Manager H. C. Kluegel for the appointment of a policeman. The women believe a trained social worker should be appointed to work with the police department. Mrs. Harry W. Blass, president of the council, declared 220 cities throughout the county have policewomen who are trained in social work.

With the scheduled construction of eighteen new dwellings, home building in Bakersfield took a spurt in August that sent the valuation of construction permits issued during the month to $119,188, nearly $80,000 above the valuation of $39,877 recorded for August, 1928. The month's total brought the valuation of all permits issued to date this year to $1,136,246, slightly behind the total of $1,283,439 for the first eight months of last year.

With notables of the scientific world present, the new $75,000 western botanical laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C., was dedicated at Stanford. Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the institute, outlined to more than 100 guests the history of the organization's study of plant biology and its attempt to further, through the new unit, "scientific research and its adaptation to meet human needs." Stanford had been selected as a site, he said, because of the opportunity it offered for co-operation between the Carnegie staff and other scientists working along similar lines. He was introduced by the presiding officer, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, vice president of the board of trustees of the Carnegie Institute.

New water mains have been laid by the McGlashan Water Company under several streets in Truckee replacing inadequate pipes, with the object of reducing leakage and conserving the scant supply in the company's reservoir tunnel above town. Check valves have been installed by each fire hydrant to permit repairs without shutting off the entire town's supply. F. S. Powell, officer of the local company, and J. B. Maxsom, local plumbing contractor, are supervising the work.

The Truckee Ski Club, pioneer organization of the West, which has been inactive for several years, was reorganized recently at a meeting of former members. The following officers were elected: John Rablin, Pacific Coast amateur champion, president; Captain E. Peterson, steamship agent, San Francisco, vice president; I. N. Wergeland, C. S. A. A. representative, secretary; T. O'Hanrahan, Truckee hotel man, treasurer. Board of directors includes: Thomas Castberg, San Francisco attorney; J. R. Ringseth, Hobart Mills contractor; Dr. C. C. Cozzallo, Truckee dentist; Jess Maxsom, Truckee plumbing contractor, and Werner von Flue, assistant agent, American Express Company.

Sequoia National Park travel has passed the record mark of last year with several weeks yet remaining of the official park year. Total attendance this year at the present rate, will reach 115,000, or an increase of 15 per cent.

Announcement was made of the sale of the Miller ranch, about for miles north of San Rafael, to the Tamalpais School for Boys. The ranch, consisting of about 1200 acres, was sold for $100,000. The school will be moved to the new location as soon as buildings can be erected.

Red Bluff's population is announced as 4492 following the issuance of 864 new telephone books in that city. The population is figured on a basis of one telephone for every 5.2 persons.

Discovery of a valuable gold nugget near the foot of Vernal Falls was reported by John Bingaman, forest ranger. Mining is prohibited in Yosemite National Park.

John H. Anderson, attorney for the United States government in Indian land cases, has completed the filing of claims by 2200 Indians of Humboldt county. Under the new law, Indians can claim rights under old unratified government treaties.

Officials of the St. Helena branch of the Bank of America of California recently announced a new bank building will be started there very shortly.

Eighteen miles of state highway between Auburn and Colfax have been resurfaced by the State Highway Commission, and two new concrete bridges, one at Bowman and the other at New England Mills have been opened to traffic. Several sharp curves have been eliminated as a result.

Two San Diego firms and one Stockton concern submitted lowest bids on three state highway projects on which the state will spend approximately $100,000. R. E. Hazard Construction Company and Holdner Construction Company, both of San Diego, and Lilly, Willard & Blasotti of Stockton got the contracts.

Elimination of two dangerous grade crossings at Califa and Berenda, Tulare county, was assured with the award to Otto Parlier of Tulare of a $30,463 contract for constructing Califa underpass. Another main San Joaquin Valley highway improvement for which contract was awarded is the $30,428 task of grading and surfacing 1.1 miles between Turner station and Mariposa road in San Joaquin county. Lilly, Willard & Blasotti of Stockton were awarded the contract.

Up in Michigan Bluff, one of the old deserted mining camps and "ghost towns" of California's early days, is a sewing machine that weighs one and one-half tons. It is to be taken to Sacramento and placed with other relics of pioneer days at Sutters Fort. A. R. Heron, director of finance, announced. The monster sewing machine, which in the gold rush days was used to sew canvas hose used by miners in hydraulic mining operations, is six feet long, three feet wide and has a head not unlike the sewing machine of today. It uses needles six inches long.

Standardization of the salaries of state traffic officers in the various counties will be undertaken by the State Division of Motor Vehicles, it was announced by Eugene W. Biscailuz, superintendent of the state highway patrol. A tentative check of the payrolls shows a variance in salaries of officers, some counties paying as high as $500 a month and others as low as $150. Since the new motor vehicle act puts all officers directly under state control, Biscailuz believes salaries should be uniform. Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, called motorists' attention to the new law making them subject to arrest if they damage another machine and attempt to avoid responsibility by sneaking away.

Surplus money in the general fund of the state at the close of the 1927-1928 budget period, is $31,130,000, or nearly $2,200,000 more than estimated, according to A. R. Heon, director of the state department of finance. The estimated surplus for June 30, 1931, in view of special appropriations passed by the Legislature and in face of tax reductions, will be approximately $23,000,000. Special appropriations, providing new functions, are estimated at $4,500,000. Various tax reductions justified on the ground that surplus and revenues are larger than state requirements will bring about a reduction of revenue of some $11,000,000, a total of $15,000,000 reduced revenues and increased appropriations.

California forest and field fires for the current season, many of them of incendiary origin, have destroyed 249,126 acres and caused a loss of $301,990, according to a report issued by State Forester M. B. Pratt. Exclusive of 171 fires in Los Angeles county that were not handled by the state, the total number of fires to date in state protected territory is 1247, the report shows. Damage to timber has totaled only $7042 on 4682 acres; 143,332 acres of range, valued at $149,580, was destroyed; the brush area burned totals 99,895 acres; 1215 acres of grain, valued at $32,252, was burned, and improvements destroyed totaled $113,114.

The car of young bass ordered for Bravo Lake, near Woodlake, earlier in the season, has been stopped by order of Captain of Patrol Oliver P. Brownlow. There will be no planting of fish fry in the lake until the water situation is improved. It was reported a short time ago that the lake was drying up. There are few fish left in the lake now, and fewer still of the game varieties, since the time last year when it was permitted to go completely dry and hundreds of bass died. It is believed, however, that water will be flowing into the lake from the Kaweah river within a few weeks.

Sonoma county has embarked upon a new plan of paying its county officials. The old method of part salary and fees has been done away with, and under the provisions of the new county government bill which became effective recently, fees must now be paid in the county treasury, and straight pay taken for services. The offices affected principally were those of the sheriff, assessor, county clerk, surveyor and coroner. In most instances the salaries were stepped up to partially recompense those who lost fees.

WILD AND FIERCE

"The other day it was quite warm," said the first Leopard brother, "and I took a little snooze or a little nap or whatever you choose to call it."

"I fell asleep at any rate, and had a most beautiful dream. I will tell you my dream."

"I dreamed that I was in a jungle and that all the hunters and every creature who could do me harm had had his gun smashed before him and that he was smiling at me, and saying: 'I will let you do anything to me you like, but I will not harm you.'"

"And then the place seemed to change and I was here in the zoo and the keeper was building me a new house."

"Leopard," the keeper said to me, "I am building you a house."

"As soon as I get it built for you, you may unbuild it for I will keep on building such houses for you."

"I watched him begin to build and the foundation of the house was of great, gigantic, enormous beautiful, handsome meat bones."

"Then the house began to be built by the keeper, and it was of meat, wonderful meat, oh, such raw meat!"

"Don't be afraid to make me trouble, Leopard," said the keeper to me in my dream, 'I'm here just to build meat houses for you.'

Such Wild and Fierce Times.

"I will eat and appreciate your kindness, keeper," I said in my most polite growl.

"Of course after I awoke I knew it was a dream, but all this time it seemed very real to me."

"That's good," the keeper said, in reply to what I had said to him. 'So we thoroughly agree. And if you should ever want to take a nibble at my arm when I am putting an extra story or floor on your house of meat, do not be bashful about it.'

"Just make yourself quite at home." "I shall, keeper," I said, "and I'm obliged to you for seeing things with my leopard's eyes, and in such a sensible fashion."

"Oh," said the second leopard, "what a pity it was all a dream."

"But such a pleasant dream while it lasted," said the first leopard.

"And," he continued, "I went on dreaming of days and nights in the Indian jungles."

"Oh, what splendid times I was having. Such wild and fierce times."

"I dreamed of fine feasts, I dreamed of freedom, and there was no one to harm me."

"It was so lovely to dream such wild dreams. How I love being wild and fierce."

"So do I," said the second leopard. "I hope I have a dream of being free and wild and fierce soon."

"Wild and fierce—what beautiful words they are."

"Wild and fierce," repeated the first leopard, "they are beautiful words."

And the leopards took a nap, repeating to themselves in low, happy growls the words wild and fierce—although they said them in their leopard way.

RIDDLES

What is yellow as gold? The sun.

What is covered, yet is seen? Book.

Where is the smallest bridge in the world? On your nose.

What is that which touches one but unites two? A wedding ring.

What is the oldest piece of furniture in the world? The multiplication table.

Round as an apple, as thin as a knife, if you guess this riddle, I'll give you a fife. A dime.

What two things go round and round the earth, but never touch the ground? The sun and the moon.

Why is it dangerous to walk in the meadows in springtime? Because the trees are shooting and the bulrush is out (bull rushes out).

Had His Troubles for Nothing

Six-year-old Freddy was on his first visit to his uncle's farm. In the morning it was found that the Jersey cow had been stolen during the night.

"That's a good joke on the man who stole her," was Freddy's comment.

"Why?" asked his uncle.

"Why, just before supper last night the hired man took all the milk out of her."

SEASONABLE DISHES

Now that the fresh carrots are so plentiful, try cooking them in different ways. Cut them up into finger-sized pieces after they are scraped and washed and put on to cook with only the water which clings to them from the washing. Add a tablespoonful of butter to a pint of carrots and put on the back of the range in a heavy aluminum dish tightly covered to cook until tender. Add salt, a bit of cayenne and a half teaspoonful of sugar when they are put on to cook.

Candied Carrots.—Cook carrots until partly tender in a tight dish with only enough moisture to steam. When nearly tender, remove to a baking dish and sprinkle with salt, pepper and plenty of sugar. Dot with bits of butter and brown in the oven.

Ice cream is such a wholesome dessert and so well liked that the expense only keeps the housewife from having it often. When prepared at home the expense is much lighter. The following is a recipe that anyone may feel is economical:

Junket Ice Cream.—Take one quart of milk, warm to lukewarm and mix well with two junket tablets dissolved in a tablespoonful of cold water, add one cupful of sugar, one-half tablespoonful of vanilla and a cupful of cream. Let stand in a warm room until firm in the freezer can. Then place the can in the ice and freeze slowly to a thick mush, then turn rapidly until hard. This kind of ice cream is easy to make, easy to digest and is healthful and nourishing.

Paprika Beets.—Cook small beets until tender. Drop into cold water and remove the skins. Slice or quarter. Arrange in a serving dish and pour over the following sauce: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half tablespoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and paprika. This amount of sauce will season one pint of beets.

Date Ice Cream.—Caramelize one cupful of sugar, add to one pint of scalded milk, stir until dissolved. Mix one tablespoonful of flour, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of sugar; stir until a smooth paste is formed with the scalded milk. Cook over hot water until the mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Pour the mixture over two slightly beaten eggs, one-half cupful of grapefruit, one teaspoonful of vanilla, a quart of thin cream and a pound of sliced dates. Cool and freeze. This will serve about a dozen large dishes.

Tasty Foods.

As salads are always a part of every day's menu, variety is always something to be looked for. Here are some suggestions worth using:

Brown-Eyed Susan Salad.—Cut up two-thirds of a cupful of dates into small pieces and marinate with french dressing. Peel four seedless oranges, remove the pulp, leaving it in sections and the membrane in the center in one piece. Place a mound of dates in the center of a lettuce leaf, surround with sections of orange, radiating from the dates, adding more dressing if needed.

Date and Cheese Salad.—Stuff dates with cream cheese which has been moistened to mix with fruit juice or french dressing. Press a pecan meat into each date. Arrange the dates in the form of a star, using five. In the center place a ball of cheese.

Date, Cabbage and Pineapple Salad.—Soak three cupfuls of shredded cabbage in cold water until crisp. Drain thoroughly, add one cupful of diced pineapple, twelve sliced dates, and lettuce to line each plate. Serve with french dressing.

Tropical Snowballs.—Scoop out of firm ice cream two balls of ice cream, roll in coconut and place on chilled plates for each serving. Add any desired sauce and serve at once. Any leftover fruit sirups may be used for this sauce, or caramel, maple or chocolate sauce may be made.

Angels.—Take one-third of a cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt; sift well. Mix one-half of a package of dates, one cupful of chopped nuts; add to the flour, mixing and stirring until well mixed. Beat two egg yolks, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla and the dry ingredients. When well blended add the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls two inches apart on well-oiled baking sheets. Bake 25 to 30 minutes. Remove from the pan with a spatula, cool, and place in tightly-covered tin box. This recipe makes 40 cookies, which keep well.

Iced coffee is the only excuse for using cold coffee, and that should be poured off from the grounds and carefully strained while hot, then allowed to cool.

RELIGIOUS FANATICS

Recent attacks on the Jews of Palestine by fanatical Moslem Arabs again illustrates the unfortunate fact that the world's most violent and un-reasoning hatreds still have their source in differences over religion, as has been the case from the earliest times.

In all ages religious zealots have sought to exterminate those of other faiths, in the apparent belief that by so doing they would gain the favor of the Almighty. Persecution, torture and wholesale massacre have been employed to this end, among both savage and supposedly civilized peoples.

It is interesting to recall in this connection a plan to capture William Penn and his band of Quakers on the high seas while on their way to America and sell them into slavery. It is claimed that those who favored this plot declared: "Much spoil may be made by selling the whole lot to Barbados, where slaves fetch good prices in rum and sugar, and we shall not only do the Lord a great service by punishing the wicked, but we shall make great gains for His minister and people."

The same intolerant spirit exists in our own days, not only among the fanatical Arabs, but among zealots of many faiths, including many who call themselves Christians.

It can hardly be claimed that the Graf Zeppelin's successful flight was due to any particular brand of cigarettes, inasmuch as smoking was not permitted on board.

The announcement that vitamins have been found in hash need cause no surprise. Nearly everything else has been found in that delectable viand.

OUR HIGHEST COURT

The seventy-second birthday of Chief Justice William Howard Taft, on September 15, marked another milestone in the distinguished career of the only man to ever hold in turn the offices of president and chief justice.

It is interesting to note that while thirty citizens of the United States have been elevated to the presidency, only ten have been appointed chief justice since the foundation of our government—Jay, Rutledge, Ellsworth, Marshall, Taney, Chase, Waite, Fuller, White and Taft.

One of these, John Rutledge, was never confirmed by the Senate, as evidences of approaching insanity developed about the time of his appointment by President Washington in 1795, and Ellsworth was named in his stead a few months later.

John Marshall served longer than any other chief justice, thirty-four years, and died in office at the age of 80. Taney served twenty-eight years, until his death at the age of 87. Jay, the first chief justice, was the youngest at the time of his appointment, being only 44. Marshall was appointed at the age of 46.

Among former associate justices of the Supreme Court, Joseph Story, appointed at the age of 32, was the youngest, while William Johnson was 33 at the time of his appointment. Associate Justice Holmes, still in active service at the age of 88, is the oldest member of the present court.

The high ability and undisputed integrity of our highest court have always been a source of pride to every American citizen. The court as at present constituted firmly maintains the best traditions of the distinguished jurists who served in the earlier days of the Republic.

THE LAST MAN'S CLUB

Only two now remain of the famed Last Man's Club, organized at Stillwater, Minn., on July 21, 1885, composed at the time of thirty-four survivors of Company B, First Minnesota regiment, which fought in the Civil war.

It was agreed at their first meeting that a bottle of wine should be set aside to be opened by the last man of the club left alive, from which he was to drink a toast to those who had gone before.

Two years ago, however, the three members then remaining decided to open the wine and drink the toast together, which they did. A few days ago one of the three, John Goff of St. Paul, aged 86, passed away, leaving only Peter O. Hall of Atwater, Minn., aged 91, and Charles Lockwood of Chamberlain S. D., aged 89, remaining.

That even two of this small band should have survived sixty-four years after the close of the war is rather remarkable, and probably few companies have two members still on the roll of the living.

This reminds us of the melancholy fact that a few more years will see the passing of the last of the gallant men, both of the Blue and the Gray, whose deeds of valor are unsurpassed in military history.

THE WRONG PICTURE

Old John Robinson, the pioneer circus man, was a picturesque character, about whom many amusing anecdotes have been told. A typical one was recently published by the Lorain Journal, and has to do with his building of Robinson's opera house, one of Cincinnati's largest and most costly theatres of early days.

He had ordered that the decorations be especially elaborate and entered one day to inspect the work of the decorator, who was engaged in painting a large picture on the ceiling.

"Whose picture is that?" demanded Old John.

"Shakespeare's," yelled the painter from his perch on the high scaffold.

"Well, does he own this theatre?" asked the real owner. The artist admitted that Shakespeare did not.

"Then paint him out and put my picture there," ordered Old John. And the picture is there to this day.

A CHANCE SHE MUFFED

A semi-pathetic story is being told of a New York girl who possibly muffed her big chance a couple of years ago. She received a letter from a girl friend in St. Louis asking her to be nice to a young man who was going to visit the metropolis, and who would call her on the telephone on his arrival.

The New York maiden was not much interested, or maybe she was a little uppish. At any rate when the stranger telephoned and invited her to have dinner with him, she made excuses and declined.

The young man did not press matters, as he was leaving New York the next day, anyway. The girl heard from him indirectly some hours later, however, through the newspapers.

Her invitation to dinner had been from Charles A. Lindbergh on the eve of his famous flight to Paris.

However Mrs. Willebrand's zeal for prohibition may be discounted, she can hardly be accused of having anything in common with a speakeasy.

It doesn't require any authority from the League of Nation to enable a girl to effectively handle a man-date.

WHY ARE WE DISLIKED?

If foreign cartoons are to be believed to represent the sentiment of other countries toward the United States, it would appear that we are considered a nation of greedy money-grubbers, seeking to exploit the rest of the world for our own selfish gain.

We doubt that this sentiment really exists to the extent our critics would have us believe. But if it does exist, a survey of American activities in relief and restoration work should prove such a sentiment to be unjust.

A case in point is the work of the Near East Relief, through which citizens of the United States have donated $100,000,000 for the saving of a million and a half lives, including 132,500 orphan children, besides feeding more than twelve million people during famine periods. This represents the achievement of only one humane organization of American origin since the war.

Many millions have been sent to other parts of the world for rehabilitation, famine and disaster relief, medical aid, and education. The total will probably never be known.

In the matter of war debts our government has been lenient, even generous, particularly when it is considered that the World war was not of our making, and was brought about through the selfishness and hypocrisy of European political leaders.

Our own statesmen have made some mistakes. They would not have been human had they not made them. But in the broader view our country has always been on the side of justice, humaneness and peace.

Why, then, should we be disliked by the rest of the world?

A HUNDRED BILLIONS

Modern business figures have reached such large proportions that the human mind can not begin to grasp them. Who, for example, can form an intelligent idea of what 100 billion dollars really means? Yet, that is the amount of life insurance now in force in the United States.

The growth of life insurance in this country since the war has been one of the outstanding business phenomena of the period. When the government provided war risk insurance for its soldiers and sailors during the war, some believed that the private companies might be injured, but it appears that the reverse has been the case.

In any event, the figures speak for themselves. The amount of life insurance in force in 1916 was about 25 billion. By 1922 it had reached 50 billion. The 100 billion in force in 1929 represents, therefore, an increase of 300 per cent in thirteen years.

Even this staggering total represents only an average of about $800 for every person in the United States. Hundreds of thousands of families are still without insurance, and the neglect of this important matter is the cause of much suffering on the part of widows and orphans who are left unprotected. Every man owes it to his family to carry a reasonable amount of life insurance.

CANDY AND BOOKS

Excepting text-books for school children, the average American buys less than one book a year, while spending $10 for candy during the same period, according to a recent writer.

This statement is somewhat surprising, as is the further fact that among the leading nations the United States stands sixth in the number of new books published annually. This refers to separate titles, and not to the total number printed.

Another strange fact in this connection is that Russia leads in the number of new titles produced, in a recent year issuing 36,680, followed in order by Germany with 31,000, Japan with 19,967, Great Britain with 13,810, France with 11,992, and the United States with 10, 153.

FATAL FASTING

Recent press dispatches told of the death of Chris Solburg, one of a party of forty Chicago health faddists who went to Colorado to endure a long fast for its supposed benefits to body and soul.

Starving himself, as recommended by the leader of the cult, Solburg's weight was reduced from 160 to 85 pounds in thirty-one days. Then he ate several sandwiches and died. Other members of the party were greatly emaciated, but no further fatalities were reported.

It is passing strange that otherwise intelligent people can be carried away by such foolishness as this fasting craze.

While it may be that most people eat more than is good for them, to go without food for many days at a time is just plain idiocy.

A seadrome upon which airplanes may land will be anchored half-way between New York and Bermuda. Its landing platform will be 1,200 feet long, and the cost of the structure will be $1,750,000.

Reindeer in Alaska owned by the United States government increased from 1,200 in 1902 to a present total of about 500,000 head.

In view of all the praise bestowed on the Bremen and the Graf Zeppelin, other nations may soon become jealous of the late Hun's popularity.

Mrs. M. May will leave this Friday for Vallejo, where she will spend a week visiting at the home of her daughter.

Paul Passaglia returned home last Saturday after a very delightful two weeks vacation spent in Modesto visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William Nassaro are receiving the congratulations of their many friends upon the birth of a baby daughter, born last Tuesday evening at St. Luke's hospital.

The Colma Community Center directors met at their club rooms on Dunk street last Friday evening and report having a very interesting and successful business meeting. Plans were made for many interesting events to be held in the near future.

Mrs. M. G. Collins, Grand Arch Druidess of California, will pay her official visit next Wednesday evening to Cypress Circle, U. A. O. D., at Colma Community Center Hall, on Dunk street. A large gathering is expected and an initiation will be put on by the Past Arch Druidess' drill team, as several new members will be welcomed into the circle.

Angelo Moresco, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Moresco, of Dunk street, was taken to St. Luke's hospital last Sunday, where he will undergo treatment. Mr. Moresco is an employee of the Shell Oil Company and is very popular and well known in this community. He is under the excellent care of Dr. R. L. Ochsner and his many friends and relatives wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Jensen, of Lawndale, are the happy parents of a fine baby daughter, born early last Sunday morning, September 15, at the Children's hospital, San Francisco. Mrs. Jensen, nee Edna Quinn, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Quinn, of Evergreen avenue, Daly City, and Mr. Jensen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Jensen, of Lawndale. The little Miss will be called Barbara Jean.

A group of friends from Colma and Daly City attended a picnic last Sunday at Neptune Beach, where they spent a very delightful day. Those who enjoyed the outing were Miss Frances Spani, Miss Rose Bertetta, Miss Esther Dubin, Miss Josephine Musanti, Mrs. G. Bertetta, Mrs. Lenale and family, of San Francisco, Paul Marchi, George Olmo, Louis Bertetta, John Musanti and George Bertetta.

The Girls' Club of Colma met at the home of Mrs. M. P. Brown last Friday evening and after a very tempting supper an interesting business meeting was held. The evening will long be remembered by the following members: Mrs. M. P. Brown, Mrs. Bessie Hoover, Mrs. Pauline Shinazy, Mrs. A. M. Sheldon, Mrs. Anna Segasite, Mrs. Josephine Green, Miss Esther Torelli, Miss Elsie Wilke, Miss Anna Kennedy, Miss Bertha Thiel and Miss Alice Thiel.

Mrs. Rose Biggio, one of Colma's pioneer women, passed away at her home last Wednesday. She was the beloved wife of Enrico Biggio, and loving mother of John and George Biggio, Mrs. Charlotte Brisolessa and Erminia Ricconi. She was a native of New York. Funeral services will be held this Saturday morning, September 21. A requiem mass will be celebrated for the repose of her soul at Holy Angels' church, commencing at 10 a. m. Interment will be in Italian cemetery.

Louis Bertetta was guest of honor at a surprise party given in celebration of his birthday on Thursday evening of last week by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bertetta, at their home in Colma. Dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening, after which tempting refreshments were served. Louis received many gifts from his friends. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Grandona, Mr. and Mrs. A. Arata, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bertetta, Mrs. Durbin, Mrs. Lenale, Mrs. Musanti, Mrs. Aremnio, Misses Marie Musanti, Josephine Musanti, Alma Passalacqua, Frances Spani, Mary Nolan, Myrtle Durbin, Mary Baldi, Esther Durbin, Linda Armenio, and Rose Bertetta; Messrs. Fred Lagomarsino, David Arata, John Musanti, Paul Marchi, Frank Perata, Ray Scramaglia, George Lenale, Pete Lenale, George Bertetta and Louis Durbin.

COUNTY GROUP AIDS INDUSTRIAL BUREAU

San Mateo was represented at an organization meeting of the "Committee of 49" for the industrial development of the entire bay district, held in San Francisco last Tuesday.

Representatives of the nine San Francisco bay counties were present at the meeting, at which a resolution was adopted for the appointment of a committee to work out a plan for a single, authoritative, fact-finding and fact-disseminating bureau for the entire bay area.

FAST DOG OWNED BY COLMA MAN VICTOR AT HALF MOON

The wonderful speed and cleverness of the greyhound Tom Hickey at the Half Moon Bay Coursing Club's meet last Sunday was a feature never to be forgotten by the large crowd that witnessed the fine day's racing. In his first course he met a champion and a winner of some twenty odd stakes, the fast and clever Gertie-owen, but she was no match for Tom Hickey. He led her eight lengths to the hare and beat her all the way, allowing her only the kill, which she made off his turn. He next met Charley Miller's fast trick, Lord Melbourne, and ran away from him on a long and grueling course. Tom Hickey is sure a speed marvel and one that his owner and trainer, Mr. Peter J. Olmo, of Colma, may well be proud. He has won four championship stakes and has yet to meet defeat.

Tom Hickey gets his good qualities by proper rights, for he is a son of that sterling performer and producer, Company Job, who was brought to this country from the Old Dart a few years ago by that well known leasher, Mr. John Sullivan, and at a great expense. Tom Hickey will be entered in the big Plains meet next November 9, 10 and 11, and it will take a mighty hound to beat him on those runaway Merced hares. Tom Hickey is named after our popular and able Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey of the First township of San Mateo county.

SIDELIGHTS

A new and somewhat expensive collecting fad is that indulged in by Mrs. Margaret Moser, of New York. Her hobby is collecting tickets for speeding, and she has specimens from Spain, Switzerland, France, Germany, Austria and Italy, besides an assortment presented by American traffic officers.

Convicts in Kilby prison, Alabama, are being provided with all modern equipment. Recently the board of administration ordered radio sets for the prisoners and a number of late model machine guns to be mounted on the walls.

The most persistent go-getter is believed to have been discovered by Columnist McIntyre. The salesman worked eight years to land a customer, being thrown out of his prospect's office once and ordered out several times. He finally not only got the big man's order, but is now all set to marry his daughter.

A unique hand-written Bible is being compiled by the secretary of the Maine Bible Society. Former President Coolidge copied the first verse of Genesis, and the Book of Ruth was copied by persons named Ruth, including the famous "Babe." We suggest that Mrs. Willbrandt take a hand when they come to Revelations.

Marcus Garvey, notorious negro exploiter and self-styled "emperor of Africa," is in bad again. This time he has been fined $125 in a Kingston, Jamaica, court for refusing to produce the books pertaining to one of his wild-card schemes, and failing to give candid answers concerning his financial operations.

It is declared that an automobile weighing 3,000 pounds and traveling at a speed of 40 miles an hour has a striking force of 2,700 tons. The fellow who discovered that did not do so from experience—he just figured it out.

Washington hostesses were again perturbed recently over social precedence and wondered just where Alexander Legge, chairman of the new farm board, should be seated at dinner. The genial chairman is said to have remarked that rather than embarrass any one he was willing to eat in the kitchen.

School kids of Greenwood, Arkansas, are jubilant. A former teacher left $30,000 to the schools of the town. The youngsters' joy is occasioned by the fact, however, that it was stipulated by the donor that no pupil should ever be whipped, no matter what the offense, and the gift was accepted under that condition.

LAST MEXICAN WAR SURVIVOR IS BURIED

With members of Lafayette Lodge of Masons acting as pallbearers, Owen Thomas Edgar, 98 years old, last survivor of the American forces that fought in the war with Mexico, was buried recently in Washington, D. C. The services at the grave in the Congressional cemetery were brief but impressive. The rituals of the Spanish war veterans and of the Masonic order were read, then the flag-draped casket was lowered into the grave, three volleys were fired and "Taps" were sounded by a bugler.

Mr. Edgar died at the John Dickson Home in Washington recently, after an illness caused by a fall from his chair. Until recently he shared the distinction of being a survivor of the Mexican war with William Fitzhugh Buckner, of Paris, Missouri. Mr. Buckner died last June 16.

It appears that Mr. Snowden, too, knew what he wanted—and how.

NAME RAILROAD MAN AS CITY COUNCILMAN

Allan F. Hunt, railroad man and a resident of Burlingame for the past 13 years, is now in office as a member of the Burlingame city council, filling the vacancy left by the resignation of the late Harry A. Totten. Hunt, who is well known in the community, was elected by a three-fourths vote at Monday's meeting of the city council after the nomination of Chris Helin. He was sworn in by City Clerk James Murphy immediately following the ballot and took his seat at the council table.

DESIGNER OF MENLO PARK CHAPEL DIES AT ROSS

Frank J. Shea, nationally known architect and designer of the chapel at St. Patrick's Seminary, Menlo Park, died last Tuesday at his home in Ross, Marin county. Shea, who was a member of the firm of Shea & Shea, San Francisco, had specialized in church structures for years and had designed many notable edifices, including St. Brigid's, St. Paul's, St. Vincent de Paul's, St. James, and Holy Cross, San Francisco, and the new St. Raphael's at San Rafael. He was 68 years old.

Rival contestants complained that some of Baltimore's juvenile flag-pole sitters were really only liars.

Ladies who go in for the sun-tan fad should remember that that's how the negroes got that way.

When one gets his leg pulled it is natural to make a lame excuse.

In the days that followed I did much to bring about a friendship between Garry and Berna. At first I had difficulty in dragging him to the house, but in a little while he came quite willingly. His sunny charm returned, and with it his brilliant smile, his warm, endearing frankness.

I must say I tried very hard to reconcile Berna and Garry. I threw them together on every opportunity, for I wanted him to understand and to love her. I felt he had but to know her to appreciate her at her true value, and, although he spoke no word to me, I was soon conscious of a vast change in him. Short of brotherly regard, he was everything that could be desired to her—cordial, friendly, charming. Once I asked Berna what she thought of him.

"I think he's splendid," she said quietly. "He's the handsomest man I've ever seen, and he's as nice as he's good looking. In many ways you remind me of him—and yet there's a difference."

"I remind you of him—no, girl! He's as much above me as I am above—say a siwash. He has all the virtues; I, all the faults. He is the self I should have been if the worst had been the best."

"Hush! you are my sweetheart," she assured me with a caress, "and the dearest in the world."

"By the way, Berna," I said, "you remember something we talked about before he came? Don't you think that now?"

"Now?"

"Yes."

"All right." She flashed a glad, tender look at me and left the room. That night she was strangely elated. I was head over ears in work. In a mail just arrived I had a letter from the Prodigal, and a certain paragraph in it set me pondering. Here it was:

"You must look out for Locasto. He was in New York a week ago. He's down and out. Blood-poisoning set in in his foot after he got out side, and eventually he had to have it taken off. He's got a false nit for the one Mac sawed off. But you should see him. He's all shot to pieces with the 'hooch.' It's a fright the pace he's gone. Seemed to have a terrible pick at you. Seems you have copied out his best girl, the only one he ever cared a red cent for. Said he would get even with you if he swung for it. I think he's dangerous, even a madman. He is leaving for the North now, so be on your guard."

Locasto coming! I had almost forgotten his existence. Well, I no longer cared for him. I could afford to despise him. Surely he would never dare to molest us. If he did—he was a broken, discredited blackguard. I could crush him.

Coming here! He must even now be on the way. He was coming back to the scene of his ruined fortunes, and God knows with what wild schemes of vengeance his heart was full. Decidedly I must beware.

As I sat there dreaming, a ring came to the phone. It was the foreman at Gold Hill.

"The hoisting machine has broken down," he told me. "Can you come out and see what is required?"

"All right," I replied. "I'll leave at once."

"Berna," I said, "I'll have to go out to the Forks tonight. I'll be back early tomorrow. Get me a bite to eat, dear, while I go round and order the horse."

On my way I met Garry and told him I would be gone over night.

"Won't you come?" I asked.

"No, thanks, old man, I don't feel like a night drive."

"All right. Good-by."

So I hurried off, and soon after, with a jingle of bells, I drove up to my door. Berna had made supper. She seemed excited. Her eyes were starry bright, her cheeks burned.

"Aren't you well, sweetheart?" I asked. "You look feverish."

"Yes, dear, I'm well. But I don't want you to go tonight. Something tells me you shouldn't. Please don't go, dear. Please, for my sake. I'm afraid, I'm afraid. Won't some one else do?"

"Nonsense, girl. You mustn't be so foolish. It's only for a few hours."

She clung to me tightly, so that I wondered what had got into the girl. Then gently I kissed her, disengaged her hands, and bade her good-night.

As I was rattling off through the darkness, a boy handed me a note. I put it in my pocket, thinking I would read it when I reached Ogilvie bridge. Then I whipped up the horse.

As I sped along, with a jingle of bells, my spirits rose. Things were looking splendid. The mine was turning out far better than we had expected. Surely we could sell out soon, and I would have all the money I wanted. My life-struggle was nearly over.

Then again, I had reconciled Garry to Berna. When I told him of a certain secret I was hanging to my breast he would capitulate entirely. How happy we would all be! I would buy a small estate near home, and we would settle down. But first we would spend a few years in travel. We would see the whole world. What good times we would have. Berna and I! Here! It had all worked out beautifully.

Why was she so frightened, so loath to let me go? I wondered vaguely and flicked up the horse so that it plunged sharply forward.

Bother! In my elation I had forgotten to get off at the inn and read my note. Never mind, I would keep it till I reached the Forks.

As I drew up at the hotel, the clerk came out to meet me.

"Gent wants to speak to you at the phone, sir."

It was Murray of Dawson, an old timer, and rather a friend of mine.

"Hello!"

"Hello! Say, Meldrum, this is Murray speaking. Say, just wanted to let you know there's a stage due some time before morning. Locasto's on board, and they say he's healed for you. Thought I'd better tell you so's you can get fixed up for him."

"All right," I answered. "Thank you. I'll turn and come right back."

So I switched round the horse, and once more I drove over the glistening road. A grim fear was gripping me. Of a sudden the shadow of Locasto loomed up sinister and menacing. Even now he was speeding Dawsonward with a great hatred of me in his heart. Well, I would get back and prepare for him.

Curse the Vile Wretch That Wrote Such Words!

There came to my mind a comic perception of the awkwardness of returning to one's own home unexpectedly, in the dead of night. At first I decided I would go to a hotel, then on second thoughts I determined to try the house, for I had a desire to be near Berna.

I knocked gently, then a little louder, then at last quite loudly. Within all was still, dark as a sepulcher. Curious! she was such a light sleeper, too. Why did she not hear me?

Once more I decided to go to the hotel; once more that vague, indefinite fear assailed me and again I knocked. And now my fear was becoming a panic. I had my latch-key in my pocket, so very quietly I opened the door.

"Berna," I whispered.

No reply.

That dim, nameless dread was clutching at my heart, and I groped overhead in the darkness for the drop-light.

Instantly the cabin was flooded with light. In the dining room I could see the remains of our supper lying untidily. That was not like her. She had a horror of dirty dishes. I passed into the bedroom—Ah! the bed had never been slept on. What a fool I was! It flashed on me she had gone over to a neighbor's to sleep. She was afraid of being alone. Poor little girl! How surprised she would be to see me in the morning!

Well, I would go to bed. As I was pulling off my coat, I found the note that had been given to me. Blaming myself for my carelessness, I pulled it out of my pocket and opened it. As I unfolded the sheet, I noticed it was written in what looked like a disguised hand. Strange! I thought. The writing was small and faint. I rubbed my eyes and held it up to the light.

Merciful God! What was this? Oh no, it could not be! My eyes were deceiving me. It was some illusion. Feverishly I read again. Yes, they were the same words. What could they mean? Surely, surely—Oh, horror of horrors! They could not mean that. Again I read them. Yes, there they were:

"If you are fool enough to believe that Berna is faithful to you visit your brother's room tonight."

"A Well-wisher."

Berna! Garry!—the two I loved. Oh, it could not be! It was monstrous. It was too horrible! I would not believe it; I would not. Curse the vile wretch that wrote such words. I would kill him. Berna! my Berna! she was as good as gold, as true as steel. Garry! I would lay my life on his honor. Dazedly I sat down. The paper lay on the hearth-rug, and I stared at it hatefully. It was unpeppably loathsome, yet I was fascinated by it. I longed to take it up, to read it again. Somehow I did not dare. I was becoming a coward.

Well, it was a lie, a black devil's lie. She was with one of the neighbors. I trusted her. I would trust her with my life. I would go to bed in the morning she would return, and then I would unearth the wretch who had dared to write such things. I began to undress.

Wearily I took off my clothes. I lay in bed with the darkness enfolding me, and I closed my eyes to make a double darkness. Ha! right in the center of my eyes, burned the fatal paper with its atrocious suggestion. I sprang up. It was of no use. I must settle this thing once and for all. I turned on the light and deliberately dressed again.

I was going to the hotel where Garry had his room. I would tell him I had come back unexpectedly and ask to share his room. I was not acting on the note! I did not suspect her. Heaven forbid! But the thing had unnerved me. I could not stay in this place.

The hotel was quiet. A sleepy night clerk stared at me, and I pushed past him. Garry's rooms were on the third floor. Through the transom I could see his light was burning.

I knocked faintly.

There was a sudden stir.

Again I knocked.

Did my ears deceive me or did I hear a woman's startled cry? There was something familiar about it—Oh, my God!

I recoiled. I almost fell. I clutched at the door-frame. I leaned sickly against the door for support. Heaven help me!

"I'm coming," I heard him say.

The door was unlocked, and there he stood. He was fully dressed. He looked at me with an expression on his face I could not define, but he was very calm.

"Come in," he said.

I went into his sitting-room. Everything was in order. I would have sworn I heard a woman scream, and yet no one was in sight. The bedroom door was slightly ajar. I eyed it in a fascinated way.

"I'm sorry to disturb you, Garry," I said, and I was conscious how strained and queer my voice sounded.

"I got back suddenly, and there's no one at home. I want to stay here with you, if you don't mind."

"Certainly, old man; only too glad to have you."

His voice was steady. I sat down on the edge of a chair. My eyes were riveted on that bedroom door.

"Had a good drive?" he went on genially. "You must be cold. Let me give you some whisky."

Remarkable Woman

Old Shierus says in his memoirs that long after he became a widower and somewhat cynical, he associated with a woman he finally concluded he would like to marry. But she refused him; she said they got much out of their association as they were, but that marriage would probably spoil it. There was probably something in the woman's statement; just how much I do not know, but no other woman in history ever took that position.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Martyr's Big Mistake

The real liberty we have is liberty of thinking, most of which a man should keep to himself, to avoid unnecessary trouble. Many a martyr might have avoided martyrdom by keeping his mouth shut, and without loss of usefulness.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Most of our time is passed getting used to the things we didn't expect.

I held the glass with a shaking hand:

"What's the matter, old man? You're ill."

I clutched him by the arm.

"Garry, there's some one in that room."

"Nonsense! there's no one there."

"There is, I tell you. Listen! Don't you hear them breathing?"

He was quiet. Distinctly I could hear the panting of human breath. I was going mad. I could stand it no longer.

"Garry," I gasped, "I'm going to see. I'm going to see."

"Hold on—"

"Leave go, man! I'm going, I say. You won't hold me. Let go, I tell you, let go—Now come out, come out, whoever you are—Ah!"

It was a woman.

"Ha!" I cried, "I told you so, brother; a woman. I think I know her, too. Here, let me see—I thought so."

I had clutched her, pulled her to the light. It was Berna.

Her face was white as chalk, her eyes dilated with terror. She trembled. She seemed near fainting.

"I thought so."

Now that it seemed the worst was betrayed to me. I was strangely calm. I made her sit down. She said no word, but looked at me with a wild pleading in her eyes. No one spoke.

There we were, the three of us; Berna faint with fear, ghastly, pitiful; I calm, yet calm with a strange, unnatural calmness, and Garry—he surprised me. He had seated himself, and with the greatest sang-froid he was lighting a cigarette.

A long tense silence. At last I broke it.

"What have you got to say for yourself, Garry?" I asked.

It was wonderful how calm he was.

"Looks pretty bad, doesn't it, brother?" he said gravely.

"Yes, it couldn't look worse."

"That's so." He rose and turned up the light of a large reading-lamp, then coming to me he looked me square in the face. Abruptly his casual manner dropped. He grew sharp, forceful; his voice rang clear.

"Listen to me. I came out here to save you, and I'm going to save you. You wanted me to believe that this girl was good. You believed it. You were bewitched, befuddled, blinded. I could see it, but I had to make you see it. I had to make you realize how worthless she was, how her love for you was a sham, a pretense to prey on you. How could I prove it? You would not listen to reason: I had to take other means. Now, hear me."

"I hear."

"I laid my plans. For three months I've tried to conquer her, to win her love, to take her from you. She was true to you than I had bargained for; I must give her credit for that. She made a good fight, but I think I have triumphed. Tonight she came to my room at my invitation."

"Well?"

"Well. You got a note. Now, I wrote that note. I planned this scene, this discovery. I planned it so that your eyes would be opened, so that you would see what she was so that you would cast her from you—unfaithful, a wanton, a—"

"Hold on there," I broke in; "brother of mine or no, I won't hear you call her those names; no, not if she were ten times as unfaithful. You won't, I say. I'll choke the words in your throat. I'll kill you, if you utter a word against her. Oh, what have you done?"

"What have I done! Try to be calm, man. What have I done? Well, this is what I've done, and it's the lucky day for you I've done it. I've saved you from shame; I've freed you from sin; I've shown you the baseness of this girl."

He rose to his feet.

"Oh, my brother, I've stolen from you your mistress; that's what I've done."

"Oh, no, you haven't," I groaned.

"God forgive you, Garry; God forgive you! She's not my—not what you think. She's my wife!"

I thought that he would faint. His face went white as paper and he shrank back. He gazed at me with wild, straining eyes.

"God forgive me! Oh, why didn't you tell me, boy? You should have trusted me. You should have told me. When were you married?"

"Just a month ago. I was keeping it as a surprise for you. I was waiting till you said you liked and thought well of her. Oh, I thought you would be pleased and glad, and I was treasuring it up to tell you."

"This is terrible, terrible!"

His voice was choked with agony.

On her chair, Berna drooped wearily. Her wide, staring eyes were fixed on the floor in pitiful perplexity.

"Yes, it's terrible enough. We were so happy. We lived so joyously together. Everything was perfect, a heaven for us both. And then you came, you with your charm that would lure an angel from high heaven. You tried your power on my poor little girl, the girl that never loved but me. And I trusted you, I tried to make you and her friends, I tried you together. In my blind innocence I aided you in every way—a simple, loving fool. You came like a serpent, a foul, crawling thing, to steal her from me, to wrong me. She was loving, faithful, pure. You would have dragged her in the mire. You—"

"Stop, brother, stop, for heaven's sake! You wrong me."

He held out his hand commanding.

A wonderful change had come over him. His face had regained its calm. It was proud, stern.

BASEBALL LOSING GRIP ON SPORTS

Golf, Tennis and Swimming Gaining Much Favor.

Baseball, long considered the "national game," is rapidly losing its grip on the sports loving public as golf, tennis, swimming and other sports in which the average person can participate surge to the fore in popularity.

There are now 10,000,000 persons playing golf more or less regularly over 1,500 club courses and 300 public or semi-public courses in the United States. At least, 5,000,000 more are finding their chief outdoor recreation in tennis, according to Jack Kofoed, veteran sports writer, who points out in the North American Review that both of these sports could hardly recruit a half million followers 20 years ago.

Among both professional sports, and amateur contests such as college football for which the spectator pays admission, baseball is lagging. Kofoed shows, by comparing the attendance at baseball and football games, boxing matches and bicycle races of 20 years ago and today. He finds that a generation ago baseball was the unchallenged leader as an outdoor box office attraction. But since 1908 baseball has increased only 330 per cent in attendance, while boxing has increased 1,750 per cent, football 500 per cent, and bicycle races 550 per cent.

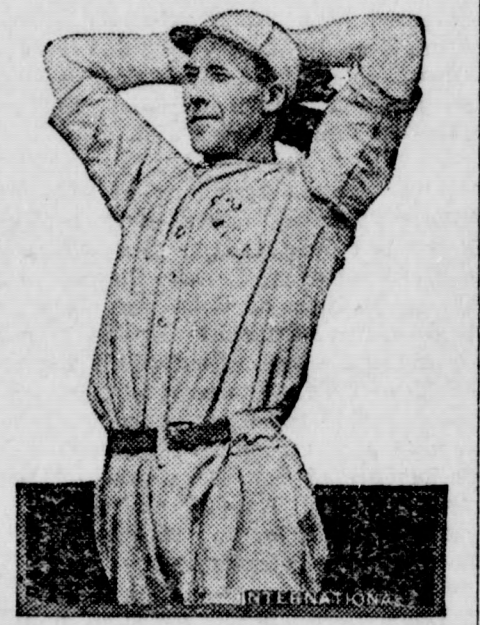

Not only are men finding golf, tennis or some other game in which they can take an active part preferable to watching a ball game from the grandstand, but the entrance of women into sports is proving a severe blow to the diamond pastime, Kofoed shows.

Women make up less than 1 per cent of the average baseball crowd, he finds. They fall almost entirely to find any interest in the game while on the other hand their increasing interest in swimming, horseback riding, golf, tennis and similar sports is drawing along with them thousands of men who once found their diversion at the baseball parks.

Two other factors, says the expert in his North American Review article, are paving the way for the certain decline in baseball. One is the crowded conditions in cities where boys once found many corner lots available on which to throw and bat a ball. These have been built up rapidly, and the playgrounds available must so economize their space that tennis, handball and similar sports are encouraged.

The baseball magnates themselves, Kofoed believes, are responsible for turning thousands of boys, all potential baseball players or fans, into followers of golf, tennis and other sports. Increased prices of admission are chiefly to blame, he points out. Where the boy of a generation ago was admitted to the park for from 10 to 25 cents, he now must pay 50 to 75 cents for the cheapest bleacher seat. On the other hand the boy of today can make as much money of an afternoon as a golf caddy and have the opportunity to play an occasional game as well.

Reaches His Goal

George Walberg, more or less inconsistent prior to this season, hit a winning stride when his mates, the Athletics, started their pennant drive that circled the flag. Walberg has turned in many fine performances for the House of Mack.

Must Leave England Right After Tourney

The Australian cricket board of control decided recently that all players chosen for the 1930 tour of Great Britain must leave England immediately the contests are ended and must agree not to return to England to play cricket for two years. As the English county qualification is two years' residence, this rule means four years out of an Australian cricketer's life before he can play for an English club, once he has been chosen to represent his own country.

Scouts Given Special Stall in Duke Stadium

Scouts will have every opportunity to concentrate on games played in the new Duke stadium at Durham, N. C. A special box has been set aside for the visitors who spend their time making funny little notations about formations, the style of star players and the like.

The Duke plant has a seating capacity of 35,000 and is the largest in the South. The stadium will be dedicated at the Duke-Pittsburgh game, October 5.

For Best Results in Home Dyeing

You can always give richer, deeper, more brilliant colors to faded or out-of-style dresses, hose, coats, draperies, etc., with Diamond Dyes.

And the colors stay in through wear and washing!

Here's the reason. Diamond Dyes contain the highest quality aniline money can buy. And it's the anilines that count! They are the very life of dyes.

Plenty of pure anilines make Diamond Dyes easy to use. They go on evenly without spotting or streaking. Try them next time and see why authorities recommend them; why millions of women will use no other dyes.

You get Diamond Dyes for the same price as ordinary dyes; 15c at any drug store.

"Dukes" Threaten Bigger Parades

Fanatical Doukhobors of the Northwest Are Getting Restless..

Spokane, Wash.—Great unrest prevails among the Doukhobors, that strange Russian religious sect which has numerous colonies with thousands of members on their huge grants of land in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

This restlessness is generally indicated in two ways, parades and the burning of schoolhouses. Paradoxical as it may seem, the parades in the broiling heat of the summer are by fully clad members, while those during the sub-zero temperatures of mid-winter are by "Dukes" and "Duchesses," as they are commonly known, entirely nude. The fanatical parades carry banners protesting against capitalism, etc.

The present unrest is principally characterized by the burning of provincial schools, scores having been destroyed in the last few weeks. Two of the largest and most important colonies are just over the international line in British Columbia, directly north of Spokane, and are known as the Brilliant and Grand Forks colonies.

Incendiarism has reached such a stage that armed guards have been placed at nearly all of the schools in the colonies. For the most part they are provincial police, but in some districts where there are other residents than the Doukhobors, the citizens have taken it upon themselves to place their own armed guards on duty.

Near riots have resulted in some of the provinces this summer, when parades have occurred, the Canadian citizens objecting to the communistic proclamations carried.

Attacked Witness.
At Nelson, B. C., a big gathering of members appeared to stage a parade. The mayor ordered them to disperse, and when they refused he called the police.

"Jesus would not carry a gun," was the universal reply made by those who could talk English, when the police ordered them to disband. When they still insisted on proceeding with the parade the mayor called out the fire department and the presence of the big lines of hose ready for action halted the demonstration.

A "Duke" was arrested for the fires near Grand Forks and a citizen gave damaging testimony at the trial against him. When adjournment was taken, the witness was attacked by the members of the sect present and it was with difficulty he was rescued by the police. "Duchesses" who attended the hearing created such a disturbance that it was necessary to remove them from the courtroom.

The Doukhobors blame these uprisings upon the Sons of Freedom, the fanatical organization of the sect. Peter P. Verigin, the president of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, Limited, the official title of the society, terms them "the Black Hundred Adventurers." He avers that they are endeavoring to instigate his deportation from Canada to Russia, from where he came two years ago to assume leadership over the Doukhobors, succeeding his father, who was killed by a bomb placed in a railroad coach in which he was riding near Grand Forks.

It is reported that the Verigin group is becoming badly infested with the Sons of Freedom, and some prominent members predict that the fanatical group will soon be in complete control. Already more than half of the Russian population has been signed up, according to reports.

One explanation is that Verigin is overly severe and that his punishment of some of his followers with brute force is resulting in a measure of retaliation under cover.

It is declared that the principal reason that the society has been opposed to sending its children to the Canadian schools is that the leaders fear education will deprive them of their control over the organization. They have succeeded in keeping their children away from the schools to a great extent. Driving along the highways in the colonies one finds scores of children around twelve and fourteen years old who have been born in the province, but who can scarcely understand a word of English, though they read and write Russian fluently.

Divorce Easy.
Members of the organization figure that a destroyed schoolhouse means a satisfactory excuse for not sending the children to school. The government, however, is compelling the society to reconstruct the burned buildings at its own expense as rapidly as possible.

This Russian sect first came into Canada in 1889 and brought with it all the customs and habits of peasant Russia. In these thirty years there has been virtually no assimilation, so that now these colonies are really a part of ancient Russia set down in the Western hemisphere.

They are governed by the rules and the regulations of the brotherhood, which are held supreme.

The marriage services are short and simple. When a "Duke" finds a "Duchess" he wishes to wed, he asks for her hand and if she consents they become man and wife the family of the bride officiating at the marriage ceremony. If she does not bear children, she is set aside by her husband who looks about for another wife, while the discarded one is considered an outcast.

Last July a protocol was issued by the brotherhood in which the statement was made that "The foundation of marriage is love. Without such love, members are free. The divorced couple must give each other certificates in writing of release, permitting each other to remarry according to their wishes. All questions pertaining to the support and the maintenance of the issue, if any, and the compensation to the damaged party, shall be left to the decision of the elders of the society whose decision shall be final and binding to the parties concerned."

In the Kootenay valley along the Kootenay and Columbia rivers in British Columbia one can ride for miles along Doukhobor farms. Everywhere women are seen working in the fields at hard labor, pitching huge forks full of hay high in the air with the ease of stalwart men.

There are scores of the society's community homes. For the most part the houses are two story frame, all of the same design. In the front on the lower floor are one door and two windows, while in the front on the second floor is only one window, with three windows on the sides. The houses are unpainted.

Two houses usually stand together, in which from a dozen to a score of families make their homes. The principal room in the house is the cooking and dining room. The older folk use the lower floor, while the upper story is occupied by the younger members.

The Doukhobors are vegetarians and they subsist wholly on the products of their land. In the community houses they bake their own bread in great loaves. Their piece de resistance is soup, made of butter and vegetables, and it is considered a great delicacy. Meat is not allowed. Cheese, rice and cooking oil are other foods. Peanuts are used in abundance.

The cooking for a community is done by one woman each week. She is held responsible for all the household duties for seven days. At the end of this period she is relieved and another takes her place, while she returns to labor in the fields. They eat much fruit and consume many of their vegetables raw.

The dress of the women is one of the most attractive features of the communities. They delight in clothing of the brightest hues.

Bathe Like Indians.

Each community has its bathhouse. Rocks are highly heated and then cold water is dashed upon them, the bath being enjoyed in the ensuing steam. Members of the community of all ages and of both sexes indulge in the baths at the same time. It is rather singular that tribes of Indians of this part of the Northwest take baths of steam in a similar manner.

The Doukhobor colonies are operated upon a community plan. The brotherhood has conducted lumbering on an extensive scale. At Brilliant, B. C., a big preserving factory is operated and the product is in much demand through the Canadian provinces. Picnards appear at the entrance of the farms of some of the "Dukes" said to be members of "the Black Hundred."

The following is a copy of one of the proclamations:

"Sons of Freedom cannot be slaves of corruption. This land is a gift of God to those who will toll it forever free from taxes which are used for wars which cannot be bought or sold. Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood."

Another reads:
"Toll and peaceful life; the Sons of Freedom cannot be the slaves of corruption; the wealth of the whole universe is not worth the sacrifice of one child."

For the most part they are a simple, pleasant, kindly, hard working group. Being religious zealots they are intensely emotional. They are easily influenced by agitators who now seem to be in control. It is for this reason that the long distance forecast for this winter in the colonies reads:

"Nuder and bigger parades."

HOPS AND JUMPS YIELD TO GLIDING AND SWAYING

Dancing Masters Have Gone Back to Waltz and Other Dreamy, Smooth Steps.

Chicago.—The dance, as it is practiced in the ballroom, is to be a thing of grace and beauty next year, members of the Chicago Association of Dancing Masters, pronounced. The jigging, and the hopping, and the trick huddles and jogs are a thing of the past.

In their place are to be the rhythmic, swaying, gliding movements that characterized dancing in the days of the waltz. A ballroom full of dancers next week, or next month, or next year, instead of presenting an eye-straining posturing, will be a pleasing and soothing sight of harmonious and tantalizing grace.

"The modern dances have abandoned the frantic motion that characterized such things as the Charleston," Thomas Sheehy, president of the National Association of Dancing Masters, pointed out. "The dance halls that permit the suggestive and 'trick' dances are losing money. People don't want to dance them and they don't want to go to places where they are countenanced."

Mr. Sheehy admits that the youth of today is much more clever with its feet than was the youth of yesterday. In fact, Mr. Sheehy is full of admiration for the intricate maze of gestures and movements of which the modern youth is capable, is full of admiration for it, that is, as long as it is confined to the stage.

The new dances themselves reflect this trend. Mrs. Anna Keeman and her son Walter, of New York, hold the honor of inventing the sorority sway, the dance that won the grand prize at the national convention at Pittsburgh. The sorority sway, a dance that experts predict will be the rage for the next season, resembles a much modified tango in its grace and beauty. The dancers glide, and sway, rather than hop, and the chief movement of the dance is a glissando, in which the left foot, instead of being brought up to the right foot, as in a two-step, is glided past the right foot in a rhythmic dip.

The most timely of the new dances on display was the grif sway, a dance not greatly different from the sorority sway. It, too, had rhythm and grace as its most important qualities. The modernistic rhythm, another prize dance, verged on a modified syncopation, "nothing," however, as great as the dances of the last few years.

Philosophy

The story is going the rounds of the meeting of John D. and a road hog. It was a narrow back road and for a vexing while the world's richest man ate dust from the slow poke ahead, who wouldn't allow room to pass. When at last a broad cross road let them by, Mr. Rockefeller said:
"There was a time when I'd have been quite angry at a man who acted as mean as that, but I learned a long time ago that resentment is bad for a man. When we lose our tempers we are only poisoning ourselves."

One Ride Free

A colored man got his nerve together and took a flight in an aeroplane. As he climbed out of the ship on its return to the field, he turned to the pilot and said:

"Suh, Ah has to thank you fo' both of dem rides."

"What are you talking about," said the aviator. "You only had one."

"No, suh," returned the passenger, "Ah done had two—mah first an' mah last."

Now is the time to buy your Winter's Coal.

"Why do you think there's company down stairs?"

"I heard mama laugh at one of papa's jokes."

A certain business man was slowly recovering from a relapse which he had suffered after an operation. The doctor called early in the morning and was frankly relieved to find his patient better.

Honestly, Mr. Vanastorbilt," he said slowly, "last night I expected to see you throw up the sponge."

"Ye gods," exclaimed you really leave one ed the victim," did inside me?"

Ring us up when you need Building Material.

And did you hear about the man who named his child Montgomery Ward because he was of the male order?

"When is she thinking about getting married?"

"You might as well ask when isn't she?"

A black hand letter addressed to a wealthy man demanded $25,000; otherwise they would kidnap his wife. Through error the missive was delivered to a poor laborer by the same name, who replied: "I ain't got no money, but I'm interested in your proposition."

Lump Coal—For Furnaces—Hand picked.

Old Gent: "What's your little brother crying for?"
Urchin: "He's not crying for anything; mother just gave it to him."
